Welcome to Your Choice, Your Voice

Hi, and welcome to the new look Newsletter from the Disability Trust. You will have noticed we have a brighter, more colourful front page and a new name - "Your Voice, Your Choice". We also have a wider coverage of news, events and information, covering local, State and National topics. As we move to the National Insurance Disability Scheme, and the massive change it will bring for people with a disability in Australia, "Your Voice, Your Choice" will aim to provide the questions, and hopefully most of the answers, that will keep you informed and able to use your voice to achieve your choice.

If there is a topic, issue, program, funding, article, event, or anything, that you think that other people should know about, then contact us at info@disabilitytrust.org.au.

This month our main article is about a mums reaction to comments about people with a disability in the media, we cover the pay rise for workers in the Social and Community sector, we check in with the Every Australian Counts campaign to get the NDIS up and running, and we look over the Supported Living fund and the upcoming seminars on how to access the funding.

Our Children Deserve Better

*Two mums are using rock music to get their message out loud and clear, writes freelance writer and It's No Joke supporter Jane Dillon.

When Larissa Ianni and Livian Jones turned on their televisions 12 months ago and saw a commentator on a commercial channel making blatant remarks about “retards”, they saw red.

As the mothers of seven-year-olds, including Anthony, who is diagnosed with global developmental delay, and Caleb, who is diagnosed with autism spectrum disorder, the women have spent their lives protecting their children from the ignorance of strangers.

(During a debate about education for children with disabilities on Seven's Weekend Sunrise, social commentator Prue MacSween said that such children should be put somewhere they can be properly trained – away from kids without special needs – that inclusive education holds back “normal” children, and that schools should be gender-segregated because “boys are so retarded”. It triggered a Facebook backlash and the show consequently held a follow-up segment, involving mums Ianni and Jones and SA politician Kelly Vincent.

Ianni says: “Anthony is just a little boy; an absolute joy with a loving and playful nature. So I naturally rile [up] when I see people visibly pointing at him in public. Fortunately, he's too young to understand at the moment, but if the public sees from the media that it's okay to make people with disabilities the butt of tasteless jokes, it's only a matter of time before he will be ridiculed for something utterly beyond his control. Livian and I started working together to bring to the attention of policy-makers the need for changes to the Disability Discrimination Act (1992).”

Jones weighs in, saying it's “outrageous in this day and age that people think publicly ridiculing someone with special needs is amusing”.

Central to their lobbying, and reflective of Ianni's musical roots (her husband is bass guitarist in Sydney band Odyssey and her grandfather was 60s and 70s promoter and Sunshine Records head Ivan Dayman), are public gigs to raise awareness about disability vilification.

In March, Angry Anderson, Peter Northcote and Odyssey headlined the first Rockin' for Rights gig in Sydney, playing to a packed crowd. The success of the event saw members of the public demand an encore performance, which will be held in October.

Angry Anderson will once again headline the event.

“The introduction of the Disability Discrimination Act in 1992 was a ground-breaking moment in Australia's history.

However, it is missing a vital provision to protect people with disabilities from disability vilification” Ianni says. “Nearly 20 per cent of Australians have a disability of some kind and it is currently legal for them to be subjected to public ridicule, bigotry and general ignorance, which is unacceptable. People are protected from vilification about race, religion, gender and sexuality, yet people with disabilities have no such protections other than in Tasmania.”

Jones adds: “Australia is a socially and culturally tolerant country in many respects, yet our attitudes to people with disabilities are often very out-dated. As a parent of a child with special needs, I want to ensure my child grows up in a country where he is treated with the same respect we afford everyone else.”

Jones says the legislative gap in outlawing vilification of people with disabilities is contrary to Article 16 of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, which is designed to protect people with disabilities from abuse. “No mother would ever want their child exposed to bullying, harassment or ridicule and if we are not socially mature enough to self-regulate offensive comments, then our legislation needs to be amended.”

Supported Living Fund for People with a disability

The NSW Government has announced that Family Advocacy will run a series of information sessions about supported living for people with a disability, their families and carers.

Minister for Disability Services Andrew Constance said Family Advocacy, in partnership with the NSW Council for Intellectual Disability, will assist people with a disability, their families and carers to build person-centred and sustainable living arrangements which are flexible and individualised.

“We have committed $60 million to the Supported Living Fund over the next five years, as part of Stronger Together 2, to provide support for 300 individuals,” Mr Constance said.

Around 30 consultation sessions about were held throughout the state last year which were attended by 270 people. A web survey was also conducted with more than 100 responses received.

Expressions of interest were then called earlier this month for the first 100 Supported Living Fund places. People who are interested in supported living are now being invited to attend family information sessions over the next two months. A further round of expressions of interest will be conducted later this year for the second year intake of 100 places.

For information session details call Family Advocacy on 1800 620 588, and for more information about the Supported Living Fund go to www.adhc.nsw.gov.au/individuals/support/somewhere to live/slfregistrations.

Happy Birthday Every Australian Counts campaign

The Every Australian Counts campaign for the National Disability Insurance Scheme celebrated its 1st Birthday on the Australia Day. On the first birthday they are 100,000 supporters strong, have held ground-breaking national events and have built a case for the creation of the NDIS in every corner of the nation.

In 2012 they want to build their supporter numbers to 200,000, see the National Disability Insurance Agency legislated, and launch sites announced. To make this happen, they need to build on their political support. So far 84 of our Federal MPs have said "I count" and appeared in a campaign "I Count" photo. However there are 66, more than one-third, who are yet to appear. Find out if your MP needs to have a photo taken www.everyaustraliancounts.com.au. If they are yet to show their support, you can find out how to help at www.everyaustraliancounts.com.au/mp\_action. While you're checking on your MP, take a minute to ask a friend to join the campaign at www.everyaustraliancounts.com.au/send to a friend.

For more information go to www.everyaustraliancounts.com.au. They have a wide range of posters, stickers, postcards and other campaign material, comprehensive information on the NDIS and excellent videos of people with disabilities and how they will benefit from the NDIS.

Michael Pursues his Passion

Few people at The Telstra 500 Super V8s Sydney Olympic Park event would have enjoyed themselves more than Michael Reid. He attended the Supercars Grand final Event with the support of his Disability Trust Client Care Facilitator, Irene Atley.

Michael has had more than his share of challenges; being diagnosed with Duchene Muscular Dystrophy as a child. He is now embarking upon a Transition to Work Program with Greenacres.

Irene surprised Michael and organised to fulfil his long held dream; to meet his favourite team, Fords Stone Brother's Racing Team. Stone Brothers accommodated Michael with his own host Chief Mechanic to the Stone Brothers - Scott Ruddock.

Scott gave Michael a 40 minute guided tour of the Pits, showed him all the cars and answered all his questions. Michael met all the drivers and mechanics; Jaimie Wincup being his favourite. He had posters autographed by all the drivers and the photos taken of Michael and the Grid girls was a highlight of the trip.

Michael says he is planning the same trip next year!

PRA's New Outlook

PRA (Psychiatric Rehabilitation Australia) is a non-government social enterprise which aims to enable people to become

People wishing to become members are welcome to visit New Outlook at any time during our opening hours. However, if you wish to speak with staff and discuss membership it is advisable to make an appointment.

Contact 1300 779 270 or there is more information at www.pra.org.au. They are located at 3 Station St, Wollongong.

King v Jetstar: Up in the air without a flight plan

Disability Discrimination Commissioner Graeme Innes explains the case that got everyone talking, and seeks your help with the next step.

As you've no doubt heard, Jetstar's "two wheelchair" policy - they will only carry two travellers who use a wheelchair on their narrow-bodied aircraft - was the subject of a recent court decision, and much media and online discussion.

Sheila King lodged a Disability Discrimination Act complaint against Jetstar when she was refused carriage on a flight between Adelaide and Brisbane in 2008. The basis for Jetstar's refusal of service was that there were already two people using wheelchairs travelling on that flight.

Sheila was offered carriage on a later flight, but this did not suit her other travel arrangements, and she had to travel with another airline at an increased cost.

There was bitter disappointment among many Australians with disability, and their family and friends, when the decision went against Sheila. I share that disappointment. There is an appeal planned from the decision.

While Jetstar's "two wheelchair" policy is also practised by Virgin Blue, and by Tiger, Jetstar's parent airline Qantas, do not have this policy. Nor do Virgin internationally. I know of no other airline in the world flying big jets which does.

For the rest of the article and Graeme's call for support go to www.abc.net.au/rampup/articles/2012/01/30/3418828.htm.

Board Development Training Opportunity

NDS is inviting current board members of not-for-profit organisations, funded by ADHC in the disability sector, to attend a customised Australian Institute of Company Directors

Foundations of Directorship three day course at no cost to participants. Travel assistance is available to eligible participants. Applications close on 17 February 2012. For more information contact Megan Sandford, NDS NSW on 9256 3103 or by email megan.sandford@nds.org.au.

Information for people dealing with young carers

A straightforward and easy-to-read booklet for anyone dealing with young carers has recently been released by ADHC.

Identifying and supporting young carers: A guide for service providers is a useful resource for those needing to know more about young carers in NSW. The booklet defines young carers and the tasks they carry out and covers issues to be mindful of with young carers and support services.

To download a copy of Identifying and supporting young carers, go to http://www.sprc.unsw.edu.au/media/File/Young\_Carers\_Report\_Final\_2011.pdf.

There are a number of other extremely useful publications from ADHC such as fliers for Supported Living Fund seminars and the At Home with Dementia manual at www.adhc.nsw.gov.au/publications/documents. All the publications can be searched by name and topic.

New ABC website—Technology Explained

New technologies have had a profound effect on the way we live, communicate and do business globally - particularly in the last 10 years. We may be living through a Digital Revolution, but trying to understand many of the new technologies available can be daunting. The ABC Technology Explained initiative aims to dispel the myths around new technologies and devices, and explore the kinds of journeys and possibilities they can and will take us on in an ever-changing, technology driven world. Whether you simply want to try Twitter or Facebook, or subscribe to your favourite radio program podcast go to www.abc.net.au/technology/techexplained/.

Landmark decision on equal pay for the Social and Community Services Sector

The Full Bench of Fair Work Australia (FWA) handed down a landmark decision on Wednesday 1st February that provides wage increases aimed at ensuring pay equity for non-government Social and Community Services workers across the country.

The wage increases announced in today's decision should help relieve the workforce shortages experienced in the disability sector. The demand for workers will increase significantly when the proposed National Disability Insurance Scheme is established.

Today's decision grants wage increases similar to those sought by the Commonwealth and the Unions in their joint submission last year, with the rates of increase for the various grades of workers from the Modernised SACS Award: Social and Community Services/Crisis Accommodation Workers, who were covered by the Case, ranging from a 19% increase for Grade 2 to a 41% increase for Grade 8.

FWA has, however, extended the period of implementation of the increase from the six years proposed in the joint submission to eight years, commencing 1 December 2012 and ending 1 December 2020. The Full Bench made this decision "... in recognition of the potential effects of the Equal Remuneration Order (ERO) on employment and service provision and on state finances".

The additional cumulative annual loadings of 1% over four years (in recognition of sector bargaining impediments and to ensure consistency with the Queensland ERO) sought in the joint submission have instead been granted as a 4% increase paid in nine equal instalments over the same period as the ERO.

Finally the ERO will stand alone, meaning that it sits outside the Award. This provision will ensure that the ERO increases remain separate from the annual wage case adjustments to Award rates.

New Director General for the Department of Family and Community Services

In December Mr Jim Moore was appointed to the position of Director General of Family and Community Services (FACS).

"In NSW Mr Moore has been pivotal in changing the way disability services are delivered, particularly a greater reliance on non-government organisations" said Minister for Family and Community Services Pru Goward. Minister for Disability Services and Minister for Ageing Andrew Constance also welcomed the appointment.

New website for IDRS

The IDRS website was re-vamped and completely changed in 2011. It is now online with details of IDRS, services they offer, and access to many resources they have produced over the years.

The Intellectual Disability Rights Service (IDRS) is a specialist legal advocacy service for people with intellectual disability in New South Wales. We work with and for people with intellectual disability to exercise and advance their rights. The new website is at www.idrs.org.au.

Board Development Training Opportunity

NDS is inviting current board members of not-for-profit organisations, funded by ADHC in the disability sector, to attend a customised Australian Institute of Company Directors Foundations of Directorship three day course at no cost to participants. Travel assistance is available to eligible participants. Applications close on 17 February 2012. ## The Financial Implications of Individualised Funding

The Industry Development Fund is hosting regional forums to discuss the implications of individualised funding within not for profit disability providers. Previously a focus group in Sydney that received an overwhelming response was held and as such it was agreed to run similar session within regions for people to attend. The session in Wollongong is on Tuesday 6 March 2012. There are no sessions south of Wollongong.

To register go to <https://www.surveymonkey.com/s/HJRXQL3>, to download. The sessions are open to all organisations funded by Ageing, Disability and Home Care. For more information contact Pauline Stanley, NDS NSW on 9256 3102 or at pauline.stanley@nds.org.au.

Update on the Mental Health Commission for NSW

The Mental Health Commission Bill 2011 was introduced to Parliament on 24 November. The Bill sets out the internal structures, principles, functions and powers that will govern the work of the Mental Health Commission. It also sets out responsibilities that will apply to the range of government agencies providing services that people with mental illness, their families and carers want to use. Importantly, the Mental Health Commission includes in its leadership someone who has or has had mental illness.

Following the Bill's passage through Parliament, the Government is planning to ensure that the Mental Health Commission is fully operational from 1 July 2012. Further information is available at www.health.nsw.gov.au/mhdao.

National Disability Research and Development Steering Committee

Disability Services Ministers have endorsed the National Disability Research and Development Agenda.

The Research Agenda aims to increase the focus in research on issues facing people with disability and seeks to provide sound evidence for future policy and practice decisions that will ultimately lead to improved outcomes for Australians with disability.

The Australian, State and Territory governments have committed funding for disability research and development. This funding supports the delivery of the objectives and reform priorities of the National Disability Agreement and the National Disability Strategy. Priority will be given to funding research, projects and initiatives that seek to adopt partnerships and collaborations with the disability sector, with people with disability or with other relevant sectors and disciplines.

Information on how to apply for funding, details of commissioned research and the outcomes of research undertaken is at the Disability Policy and Research Working Group website www.dprwg.gov.au/research-development.

For more information relating to the Agenda, contact Ms Mary Osborn, Senior Policy Officer, DPRWG Secretariat by email at mary.osborn@facs.nsw.gov.au.

TTW Service Provider Workshops

Following the success of the previous 'Engaging and Supporting Employer Partnerships' workshops, the Australian Network on Disability (AND) will deliver 14 workshops for Transition to Work (TTW) service providers in metropolitan and regional NSW in March 2012. Further information on AND can be found at their website www.and.org.au.

The Workshops have also been designed to fit within the broader policy environment (state and commonwealth) with regards to increasing employment outcomes for people with a disability.

For further information please contact Laurence Kerr, Project Officer ADHC on 8270 2120 or laurence.kerr@facs.nsw.gov.au. ADHC strongly encourages organisations to be represented at these workshops.
